

Mitigating the Misreading of Boys of Color in Schools

10:00am-1:00pm, Saturday, December 9, 2017

Milbank Chapel, Teachers College

Join us for an event created by high school boys of color from the UMOJA Network around issues of injustice and inequity in education. This event is intended to ignite discussion on how educators can work with Black and Brown males in high schools to reimagine the educational landscape.

Schedule of Events

Opening Speaker: Erik Nolan, Founder of UMOJA Network for Young Men, Inc.

10:00am: Multimodal presentations spotlighting the life histories of boys of color

10:45am: Socratic circle analyzing the multimodal texts and what they mean for educators

11:30am: Panel featuring Black and Brown high school boys reflecting on their experiences

12:00pm: Lunch conversations on the education of boys of color in the era of Trump

Closing Speaker: Isaac Scott, The Center for Justice at Columbia University

The event is open to educators (in-service and pre-service), Teachers College students, faculty and staff, high school students, families, and community members. Lunch will be provided.

RSVP required. To RSVP, email ote@tc.edu.

Teacher Opportunity Corps
Teachers College, Columbia University

Office of Teacher Education
Email: ote@tc.edu Phone: 212-678-8219 Office: Zankel 411

To request disability-related accommodations contact OASID at oasid@tc.edu, (212) 678-3689, (212) 678-3853 TTY, (646) 755-3144 video phone, as early as possible.